The southeast block of downtown Davison looks a lot different with the Downtown Development Authority voting last week to reject the already-begun pilot program. The motion to remove the canopy was made March 21 by authority member and Mayor Fred Rappuhn. The motion was made with a 6-3 vote.

Honors history students of Davison High School teacher Raina Pals got an opportunity to be part of History Women’s History Month with a live museum display in the athletic meeting room. The students, who not only put together exhibits, interacted with this displays as well. The presentation took place March 22-23. Pals attended a teacher’s workshop in Lansing last summer, and said teachers were asked to come up with a project.

The city of Davison and other municipalities are continuing a “wait and see” attitude concerning potential requirements to help pay for cleanup of the Metamora Landfill in Lapeer County. A letter from city Attorney James Ruhalla was presented to the city council Monday outlining the views of Attorney Ronald Richert who was representing a coalition of municipalities in the case. Richert said there is no activity in the case in this time. Because there was a federal lawsuit concerning a toxic waste incinerator. “The effects of this being an election year” and the questions about incinerator. “The effects of this being an election year” and the questions about “superfund” protection law.

Joseph Miller sustained a heavy loss Wednesday about 1:30 p.m. when the barn on his farm in Richfield was destroyed by fire. Six head of cattle and the calf died in the blaze. The origin of the fire isn’t known. Mr. Brown’s son, Fred, is living on the farm.

Sealed bids will be received for the combined work of Street Commissioner, Janitor and Marshal of the Village of Davison, for the ensuing year, and said bids to be in the hands of the village clerk before 7 p.m. April 9, 1917. Specifications of the duties of these offices will be on file at the Clerk’s Office. The Village Clerk reserves the right to reject any and all bids. — Compiled by Gary Gould Pieces played at Carnegie included the “Downey Overture” by Osca Navarro, and Navarro was in New York to help the orchestra work on the piece, “Irish Tune from County Derry” by Percy Grainger and parts of “The Planets” suite by Gustav Holst. Kelcey played the violin at the event.

“After my experience at Carnegie, I can’t wait to play at the Sydney Opera House,” said Kelcey. “My dream is to one day play as a professional violinist and travel the world meeting new people and to expose myself to as much music as possible. My goal is to go into the music field, but I’m still debating whether I want to go into music performance or music education.”

Krysta said, “The amount of effort she is willing to put into her music shows, and she continues to grow as a young adult and violinist.”

Kelcey performed at Carnegie Hall on Feb. 6.

“It was an amazing experience for me because I got to meet new people and make music for others while we enjoyed playing together for one night,” she said.

“The one thing I will never forget was when Kelcey came back from her performance and she had excitement that radiated off her face,” said Krysta. “It was an excitement that no one could understand. After Carnegie, we can’t wait to go to Sydney — it’s a once-in-a-lifetime experience.”
